24.	Summary of the Event (Around 100 words)	A workshop on Classification of Personality Types – Assessment was conducted on 11 December 2025 in the 7th Floor PG Library for MBA students as part of the Organizational Behaviour learning series. The session focused on helping students understand their own personality profiles through structured self-assessment tools and guided reflection. The workshop began with an introduction to the Big Five Personality Framework, commonly referred to as the OCEAN Model, which classifies personality into five major dimensions: Openness, Conscientiousness, Extraversion, Agreeableness, and Neuroticism. Students completed a self-assessment questionnaire designed to measure their tendencies across each of the five traits. Following this, the facilitator explained the meaning, behavioural indicators, and workplace relevance of each dimension. Openness was discussed in the context of creativity and adaptability, Conscientiousness in relation to task discipline and reliability, and Extraversion in terms of sociability and leadership tendencies. Agreeableness was linked to cooperation and empathy, while Neuroticism was examined in relation to emotional stability and stress management. Interactive discussions enabled students to interpret their assessment scores, compare personality patterns, and reflect on how their traits influence communication, teamwork, and decision-making. Students reported that the workshop was insightful, engaging, and valuable for understanding their behavioural strengths and areas for development.
